Type Foundry.

E. WHITE & W. HAGER,

RESPECTFULLY inform the Printers of the United States, to whom they have long been individually known as Letter Founders, that they have now formed a co-partnership in said business, and hope from their united and extensive experience, to be able to give full satisfaction to all who may favor them with their orders.

The introduction of machinery, in place of the tedious and unhealthy process of casting type by hand, a desideratum by the European and American Founders, was by American ingenuity, and a heavy expenditure of time and money, on the part of our senior partner first successfully accomplished —Extensive use of the machine-cast Letter, has fully tested and established its superiority, in every particular, over that cast by the old process.

The Letter Foundry business will hereafter be carried on by the parties before named, under the firm of White, Hager & Co Their Specimen exhibits a complete series from Diamond to 14 lines Pica; the book and news Type being in the most modern and light style.

WHITE, HAGER & CO. are agents for the sale of Smith and Rust Printing Presses, which they can furnish to their customers at the manufacturer's prices.

Chases, Cases, Composing Sticks, Ink, and every article used in the Printing business kept for sale, and furnished on short notice. Old Type taken in exchange for new at nine cents per pound.

INIS.

THE CHINESE SON.

I come to thee, my mother! the black sky
Is swollen with its thunder, and the air
Seems palpable with darkness, save when high
The lurid lightning streams a ruddy glare
Across the heavens, rousing from their lair
The deep-voiced thunders. How the mounting storm
Strides o'er the firmament! Yet I can dare
Its fiercest terrors, mother, that my arm
May wind its shield of love around thy sleeping form.

What uproar! raging winds and smiting hail,
The lightning's blaze, and deaf'ning thunder's crash,
Let loose at once for havoc! I should quail
Before the terror of the forked flash,
Did not the thought of thee, triumphant dash
All selfish fears aside, and bid me fly
To kneel beside thy grave; the rain drops plash
Heavily round thee, from the rifted sky—
Yet I am here—fear not—beside thy couch I lie.

Thou canst not hear me! the storm brings not now
One terror to thy bosom—yet 'tis sweet
To call to mind the smile, wherewith thy brow
Was wont, in gone-by times, my lips to greet,
When o'er the earth the summer tempest beat,
And the loosed thunder shook the heavens; but when Did ever word or glance of mine, not meet
A smile of love from thee? The world of men
A friend as thou hast been will never yield again.

Oh mother! mother! how could love like thine
Pass from the earth away? On other eyes
The glance of maternal fondness shine,
And still on other hearts the blessing lies
That made mine blissful; yet far less they prize
That boon of happiness, and in their glee,
Around their spirits gather many ties
Of joy and tenderness; but all, to me,
That made the earth seem bright, is sepulchred with thee

They sometimes strive to lure me to the halls,
Where wine and mirth the fleeting moments wing;
But on my clouded spirits sadness falls
More darkly there, than where earths caverns fling
Their gloom around me, and the night winds sing
Through the torn rocks their melancholy dirge:
Or when, as now, the echoing thunders ring
O'er the wide firmament, and mad gales urge
Into an answering cry, the overmastering surge.

The storms of nature pass, and soon no trace
Is left to mark their ravage; but long years
Pass lingeringly onward, nor efface
The deep cut channel of our burning tears
Or aching scars that wasting sorrow sears
Upon the heart. Lo! even now a gleam
Of moonlight through the broken clouds appears,
To bless the earth again, I fain would dream
It was a smile of thine, to bless me with its beam!

Fibbleton's Travels.—We have been not a little amused in looking through the book bearing the above name, which is well calculated to drive away a fit of the spleen. The following account of Holt's Hotel will better give the reader an idea of this gentleman's descriptive powers than any thing we can say to his credit in this particular; we shall, therefore, content ourselves with transcribing it. At the same time, recommending to those who would obtain a true account of this country and its manners and customs, to purchase "Travels in America, by George Fibbleton, Esquire, Ex-Barber to his Majesty the King of Great Britain," as he will therein find set forth much matter of fact which the extreme modesty of Mrs. Trollope, Mr. Hamilton, the Reverend Mr. Fiddler, and divers other veritable travellers from Old England would not permit them to make known.—N. Y. Merc. Adv.

"Before I proceed any farther, I ought to state that I took lodgings at Holt's Castle, as it is called. And, indeed, compared with the other diminutive structures with which the city generally abounds, it may with great propriety be called a castle. It is built of blue marble, a little inclining to a bottle-green. The stone, as I was informed, was brought from Florida, one of the Spanish provinces; and really, considering it was wrought by an American artist, looks tolerably well—especially when the light strikes it in a favorable position.

The structure is eleven stories high, which is very remarkable in America, most of the buildings being only from three to five stories. In fact, it looks down upon the surrounding buildings in the same manner as our most gracious English nobility look down upon the peasants beneath them. A great inconvenience, however, would attend the height of this building, were it not for the machinery which the landlord employs to hoist people up to their different rooms. The machinery is carried by water, which, I am told, was obtained by boring thirteen hundred feet into the solid rock. It was a work of twenty years, and cost not less than half a million sterling, which is equal to nearly a million of New York currency.

It is curious to witness the operation of this machinery for elevating passengers and baggage; for, to do the Yankees justice, they do not altogether lack ingenuity in the mechanical arts. In the first place, it puts out a kind of artificial hands, with which it is provided, and loads itself with passengers, trunks, valises, and other baggage. As soon as it has done this, at a given signal, it mounts through a common opening, to the several stories—stopping regularly at each one, in order to leave such passengers or baggage as happen to occupy rooms in that story. And so it proceeds until it has reached the top, when it begins to descend, stopping in like manner to carry down such persons, with their baggage, as wish to descend. At present it merely moves up and down perpendicularly; but it is intended by Mr. Holt so to alter and improve it, that it shall convey his guests directly to their several rooms, and also fetch them away whenever they wish to leave them.

Mr. Holt, I understand, is a descendant of the learned Chief Justice Holt, formerly of the King's Bench. However this may be, he is certainly a great man, and would himself fill a Judge's seat to admiration. In fact, it was chiefly owing to his very respectable size, that I at first resolved to take up my lodging at his house. He is the best, and almost the only specimen of a plump landlord, I saw during my whole stay in America.

In so large a house as the Castle, it may well be imagined there is a great choice of rooms. For my own part, I did not stop until I had reached the eleventh story. I had no idea of taking up with any of the inferior rooms; though I was informed that many very respectable gentlemen and ladies lodged as low down as the sixth story, and some even as low as the fifth. But this was rather a matter of necessity, on account of the crowded state of the house; and very few persons, of decided gentility, would choose to lodge below the seventh story.

The dining room, which is three hundred and seventeen feet long, and fifty-four wide, is situated in the sixth story, so as to accommodate equally those who room below and those who room above. Six tables are ordinarily set from one end of this vast dining room to the other. But I cannot abide the American custom of so many persons eating together. It is barbarous in the extreme. Nay, more, it is indelicate. What can be more so, I would ask, than two or three hundred persons of both sexes, to sit ranged along opposite to one another; so that they cannot help peeping into each other's mouths? It is a very disagreeable exposure of one's internal affairs. But it is not to be wondered at in this country; for really those republicans have no idea whatever of any thing, except getting money, talking politics, and boasting of their own superiority. In one respect, however, I must own that they have the advantage; for they play knife and fork with such dexterity, and keep their mouths so constantly crammed with food, that there is very little chance of ever seeing into their mouths, however much an Englishman might be exposed under the like circumstances.

Before I conclude my description of Holt's Castle, I should mention that it is surmounted by a lofty tower, in which are constantly stationed about twenty armed men, for the defence of the premises. These are chiefly riflemen, who can shoot a ball, from a mile and a half to two miles, and hit a York shilling—about the size of an English sixpence—every shot. But, like the rest of their countrymen, they are a savage and merciless set of men, as I more than once had occasion to observe during my short stay at the Castle. Indeed I suffered in sundry instances, from the fierce and uncivilized behaviour of these rude republicans. One night—it was not later than three o' clock—as I was returning to my lodgings, a little glorious with the fifth bottle, one of the guards from the tower hailed me, and demanded in a very insolent manner, to know why I made such a noise—alleging that I would wake up the whole house by such unseasonable uproariousness.

"D—n your eyes!" said I, "for an insolent Yankee puppy! What is it to you how much noise I make? I'm an English Gentleman, and have a right to make as much noise as I think fit."

"You're no gentleman, returned he, "otherwise you would not come home drunk at this late hour, disturbing every body with your indecent songs, and boisterous behaviour."

"You be d—d!" said I, "for an unmannerly republican." And with that I made at him directly, up to the tower, when instead of levelling his rifle at me, as a well disciplined soldier would have done, he seized me by the collar of my coat, and the seat of my breeches, and sent me headlong down stairs, before I had time to think fairly what I was about. The next day, I challenged the whole twenty, to go and fight me at Hobokin, which is the place, where all honorable men among the Americans, go to settle their disputes in an honorable way. But these castle guards, with true Yankee meanness of spirit, told me to go to the devil, for they would'nt dirty their hands with me. And so, after swearing at them awhile I prudently concluded to let the matter drop."

Undulating Railways.—This subject seems to have attracted much attention in Eng and: so much, indeed, that the experiment upon a large scale is about to be made.

Rail Road Journal.

From the National Intelligencer.

Further hostility to the Bank.—For the purpose probably of preparing the public for a removal of the Government deposites remaining in the Bank of the United States, and to defend the measure in advance, there have been forwarded from this city, and published in the New York Standard, abstracts of the confidential returns made weekly by the Bank to the Secretary of the Treasury, exhibiting the state of its affairs. The design of this violation of confidence is to show that the institution is not in a condition to pay over, if suddenly called on, the public moneys now on deposite in the Bank and its various Branches.

The publication in the Standard shows to what lengths the Government will go to destroy an institution which in other countries it would be the pride, as it would be its duty, to foster. If these abstracts have not been forwarded to New York with the knowledge and permission of the Secretary of the Treasury himself, we would ask, what right has any one to have access to statements which are made to him in confidence? None but Congress can or ought to have access to them, and they should be published by order of Congress alone.

But on the main question at issue, without going into details on the subject, we would ask what institution, or indeed individual, in the country, could pay their debts, if specie alone was to be required? And has not the Bank ample resources to meet every claim against it? In what do the now-favored banks show a greater ability than the Bank of the United States, to pay in coin? Look for instance, at the state of the Bank of the Metropolis, the bank selected in this city for the public deposites. In Jan. 1832, when its latest statement was communicated to the Treasury Department, it made the following exhibit. The claims on it were—

Notes in circulation,	$62,885
Due to Banks,	20,911
Due to individuals,	74,977
		158,773
Its means were—Specie,	10,974
Due from Banks	5,890
Notes of do.	23,213
		40,170
		118,696

Leaving a deficiency of 118,696, if all the demands were presented at once. We do not say that that Bank cannot meet its engagements; we dare say that it can do so; but surely if the Bank of the United States is a doubtful depository of the public funds, the Government has not shewn much prudence in employing others situated as that Bank is, when with a specie fund of $11,000, it might be called on to do business to the amount of several millions annually, as the Branch Bank of this city has done.

A correspondent of the Richmond Whig, speaking of the removal of the public money from the Branch Bank of the United States at that place, to the Bank of Virginia, for safe keeping, says:—

"That the public may judge whether it will be more safe by being removed, than it was before, I will give an expose of the two Banks. The Bank of the U. States in its last exhibit to Congress, shewed, that after meeting all demands against it, there would remain a balance of from six to eight millions. The Bank of Virginia in its last exhibit to the Legislature, shewed that it was short of its Capital about five per cent. This is what Gen Jackson calls taking care of the public money. I really think, it looks much more like jumping out of the frying pan into the fire."

The Jackson paper of Philadelphia, the Pennsylvanian, contains an article in relation to Mr. Rush, purporting to explain the true foundation of some rumors in regard to that gentleman, from which we take the following statement:

Hon. Richard Rush has been quite a topic of conversation in our city circles during the last week. The National Gazette had a long Paragraph about him last Saturday. The cause of all this talk has grown out of a correspondence said to have taken place between the President and Mr. Rush, in which the latter has approved the course of the former in taking away the deposites from the United States Bank. We believe, however, that a good deal of what is "said and sworn to" about Mr. Rush, is rather apocryphal. The facts, as we have them, are these: Mr. Rush presented the President with a copy of his late work on the "Court of London." The President, as he always does on such occasions, politely thanked the donor, and spoke handsomely of the spirit and temper of the brochure. Mr. Rush then replied to the President's thanks, and said something in approbation of the removal of the deposites. He was not, however, by any means, so warm and eloquent on the subject as he has been on anti-masonry; but what he has said has annoyed the friends of the Bank a good deal, particularly as he once spoke so well of it when he was Secretary of the Treasury."

The General Assembly of Tennessee have passed a resolution unanimously, instructing their Senators and requesting their Representatives in Congress to vote against the re-charter of the United States Bank.

The declaration by the Globe some days ago, that the President would have removed the deposites even though Mr. Van Buren and all his cabinet had been opposed to it, utterly demolishes the flimsy argument founded on the fact of the order for the removal having been given by a Secretary of the Treasury, and that therefore it was, as the law required it should be, the Secretary's act, performed upon his own responsibility, and from his own views of duty. It was the will of the imperious chief, and that once ascertained, there lacked not ready instruments to carry it into effect. Such in all ages has been the curse of power—honor, therefore, is due in a ten fold degree to the firm and upright Duane, that he would not bend his conscience to the deed.

New York American.

It is said that all the various government officers and departments in Washington heretofore doing their business at the Branch Bank of the United States in that city, have been ordered to transfer their accounts elsewhere. The modest looking building used as the Banking House, standing as it does, in sight of the Government House, must of itself be an eye-sore. No orders have as yet, however, been given to have it removed!

Alexandria Gazette.

"All doubts as to the willingness of the State Banks to undertake the service of the Government, to the same extent, and on the same terms, as it is now performed by the Bank of the United States, is put to rest by the report of the agent recently employed to collect information." "It is not to be supposed that they would be willing to place themselves in a situation which they cannot occupy without danger of annihilation or embarrassment."—President's reasons.

In casually looking over the late Presidential Rescript, we were struck with the above sentences, and the hasty opinions they express. The report of the agent could not possibly have put to rest a question which he not only had not tested, but did not even know how to go about examining. What bank in New York has agreed to transfer to St. Louis, annually, a million of dollars of the money collected in that city? What bank in Philadelphia has agreed to guarantee the safety and facility of transfer, by any N. York local bank, of the ten or twelve millions of dollars annually collected in that city? What bank in the city of New York has agreed to disburse, from funds so collected there, amongst the Lord knows how many thousand pensioners, all over every State and Territory in the Union, the amount necessary to pay all? The fact is, the agent could not have ascertained all that he is said to have done, because when questioned by the bank officers as to the particulars of service they were expected to perform, &c., he absolutely could not tell. He got nothing but general offers, civil professions, and vague promises. The trouble of the arrangements is all to come. We wish Mr. Taney joy of it. We know he has the aid of his shrewd coadjutor Olivier, but he will nevertheless have his hands full, and he must not be surprised if he find his strong-box empty before he is aware of it.—Nat. Int.

The Deposites, Money Market, &c.—In the month of October, there will be deposited in the three banks of New York one million six hundred thousand dollars. The estimate for November, in bonds, is one million three hundred thousand dollars in cash duties—making in all, nearly four millions of dollars belonging to the people. It appears, therefore, that in two months only deposites will have been made to an amount nearly equal to the capitals of these three banks. What security do these Banks furnish the Government? and how do other sections of the United States participate in the benefits of the immense collections and deposites in this district? Formerly they were collected here, and distributed fairly throughout the Union. Now, we should be glad to know what these local banks are doing with the money belonging to the country. Are they making preparations to loan portions of it in Ohio, Kentucky, the Westerns parts of Pennsylvania, New York, and Virginia? We must make inquiry with regard to the state of exchanges. If the price of drafts from the Western and Southern countries on New York have risen, then we shall be satisfied that there is no distribution.—N. Y. Evening Star.

CATHOLIC PROVINCIAL COUNCIL.—This Assembly is now in session in this city—it was opened formally yesterday in the Cathedral. The Most Rev. Doctor Whitfield, of course, presided, as Archibishop of Baltimore, and celebrated the Mass of the Holy Ghost on the occasion.

The other Bishops present were the Right Rev. Doctor England, of Charleston—Right Rev. Doctor Rosati, of St. Louis—Right Rev. Doctor Fenwick, of Boston—Right Rev. Doctor Dubois, of New York—Right Rev. Doctor Kenrick, from Philadelphia—Right Rev. Doctor Rese, of Detroit, and the Right Rev. Doctor Purcell, of Cincinnati. The only Bishops entitled to seats who were not present, are the Right Rev. Doctor Portier, of Mobile, (who arrived this day) and the venerable Doctor Flaget, of Bardstown, the Senior Suffragan, whose delicate state of health did not permit his travelling hither. A large body of priests, selected by the prelates as advising theologians, filled the Chancel. The appearance of the sanctuary was exceedingly striking; the bishops wore capes and mitres, and were seated each side of the altar; the priests in their sacred vestments occupied the front before the platform. After Mass, the Bishop of Charleston delivered a discourse on the nature of church government, the object and utility of councils, and the peculiar benefits likely to arise from their celebration in this country.

The Prelates hold their legislative sessions daily every morning at nine o'clock; the consultations of the Prelates and Theologians take place in the afternoon at four o'clock.

Good Roads in England have effected a very efficient reform in the Post Office department: individuals have been induced to enter into contracts, in nearly every county, to carry the mail ten miles and in several cases twelve miles an hour. A few years since, seven miles was considered very expeditious. As a proof of the excellent state the roads are kept in, we will just mention that, about two years ago, Lord John Russell was invited to a public dinner, sixty miles from London: the dinner was about five o'clock: the speeches occupied the time until ten o'clock, and were taken down by Mr. Wood, one of the short-hand reporters to the "Morning Chronicle," and filled several columns of that paper. He transcribed every line for the compositor on his way to London in a post-chaise. The paper was printed in London, and dispatched by the 4 o'clock morning coaches to the very town where the entertainment had been given, and was there in sufficient time for the breakfast tables, at 9 o'clock.

A Compliment.—Some beautiful blue cloth manufactured by P. H. Schenck & Co. at Glen's falls, having obtained the premium at the Fair, Messrs. Lynde & Jennings of 116 Broadway, made from it a suit of clothes in the best style, which they presented to Mr. Clay. It was a liberal and well imagined compliment.—N. Y. American.

Mr. COOPER's last novel, The Headsman, was published yesterday, by Messrs. Carey, Lea, & Blanchard. None of the European productions of our celebrated author have ever deserved half the reputation which will be accorded to the Headsman. In the sublime scenes of Switzerland, the spirit of his native land, seems to have descended upon the author, and, holding communion with nature and rural life, he has produced from a full mind and exciting traditions, a tale of absorbing interest. The charm of Cooper's works consists in his descriptions of encounters and hair-breadth escapes by land and sea; of storms, battles, and shipwrecks—but for his descriptions of the tender passion, we have never yet felt much sympathy. He will rescue a lady from a situation of peril, with the adroitness of a sailor or a soldier; he can guide his lovers from the trail of an Indian, or the foundering wreck of a tempest-tossed vessel; but when he gets them together, and drives them into a colloquy of eight or nine pages, they become inflictions of the greatest magnitude. The lady blushes in the same way through all his fictions; and the young gentlemen, to use one of the author's favorite phrases, looks furtive. The Headsman is, perhaps, less objectionable in this respect than almost any of the writer's creations. It abounds with spirit-stirring passages, and events; the order of narration is admirably preserved, and the mysterious unity of the circumstances betokens the skill of a master. Those who had fears of the declining powers of Mr. Cooper will find them removed on perusing this last and noble emanation of his genius.—Phil. Gaz.

Trial and Condemnation of Alcohol.—Under this title the Temperance Recorder published some weeks ago a very clever article, which we have ever since been waiting for room enough in our columns to republish. Its length, however, is so great, that we now despair of effecting that, and therefore give the last words and confession of the culprit, as we find them in the late No. of the Recorder:

Last Words and Dying Confession of Alcohol.—The time has at last come, when, by a righteous decision of my country, I am doomed to an ignominous destruction. Before I go hence, and am buried forever in an execrable grave, I wish with suitable solemnity to make an humble confession of my guilt, and to lift my warning voice against those insidious enemies to the peace and happiness of man, that captivate his heart while they destroy his soul.

I acknowledge the truth of the testimony brought against me, the fairness of my trial and the justice of my sentence. It is but deserved retribution that I should be executed by water, to whom, notwithstanding his spotless innocence, I have ever been an implacable enemy, and have injured in the estimation of thousands, to whom he was friendly. If all the evils which I have propagated in the world, had been enumerated in the indictment against me, a general confession of their truth would have been sufficient; but oh, how little did my accusers, or the witnesses against me know of the secret machinations in which I have been engaged to bring ruin upon the family of man.

When I was yet a youth, unknown to the community, my first device was to gain access to the hearts of the multitude, by representing myself as a philanthropist. To this end, I became servant to a physician. Alas! alas! I am sorry to say, my well meaning patron died my slave. He was so captivated with my insinuating qualities, that he introduced me most extensively, and with high commendation, to all his customers, and I soon became the admiration of the sick and the well. My popularity was so great, that all my acquaintance speedily became my warm friends, and indeed, in most cases, such was the power of my fascination, that they fell deeply in love with me and felt that I was positively indispensable to their happiness. I now entered into a league with sin, and our sway was irresistible. By inflaming the passions of men, I destroyed their judgment and stupified their consciences, so that they at once became weak and wicked Sometimes they would mourn over the evils I was producing in the community, and bewail my destructive influence among their own friends; but no sooner did they touch me, than my bewitching power forced them again into willing captivity. They felt not the danger; they knew not the poison that drove others to phrenzy, was circulating in their own veins; they could not be made to believe that they were voluntary agents in the work of destruction. Thus I had millions in requisition, who never felt the cord that bound them, and wist not till they were beyond hope, that "their strength was departed." As my influence increased, I became bold; I entered the councils of state and produced wars, I went into armies and stirred up rebellion and treason: on board of ships at sea, I caused revolt and mutiny; in legislative assemblies, violence and discord; in churches, backsliding and hypocrisy; in families unnatural alienation and conjugal infidelity; and poverty, disease and death every where. In my whole career, sin was my inseparable companion, and though I do not make this disclosure with the hope of pardon; this I do not expect, I am conscious of not meriting it; for my guilt is too open, and read of all men, to permit it; yet as I know that my accomplice is still at large, I wish before I go hence, to apprize the public, that when I am removed, he will be more easily restrained; his arts will be less successful, and with the same vigilance, he will be much more easily detected and subdued than when we were associates.

Six hundred dollars was collected in St. Mary's Church, Philadelphia, after a Charity Sermon, preached by the Rev. Dr. Pise, for the benefit of St. Joseph's Orphan Asylum.

Mammoth Hog.—We have seen a handbill respecting a Mammoth Hog, which, we are informed, is now exhibiting on board a canal boat at Albany. According to the handbill the Hog was raised in Warren county, Ohio, is upwards of three years old; it weighs fourteen hundred pounds! measures nine feet in length, eight feet four inches in circumference, and three feet eleven inches in height. If this statement be correct, the animal is the largest of the swinish multitude that we have ever heard of. The owner will make money by bringing him to this city for exhibition.—N. Y. paper.

Serious Accident.—Yesterday, as a gentleman by the name of Booth, a merchant from Edenton, N. C., was in the act of jumping from the car on the rail road, near Newcastle, Del., he fell into the track on which they were running the baggage car—one of the persons employed in removing the baggage, attempted to draw him out, but unfortunately not in time. The first wheel passed over both his legs, near the body, the second a little lower down, and the third over one leg below the knee. He was not expected to live when the steamboat left Newcastle.—Com. Adv.

We learn from the Middletown Sentinel of Wednesday, that Mrs. Abigail Stocking, one of the persons injured by the explosion of the Steamboat New England, died in that town on the previous morning. It also mentions the death of D. H. Jeroem, deck hand, and adds—"Three dead bodies have been taken from the river—one of which was a female not before known to be missing."—The whole number of deaths thus far, is probably not less than sixteen; and we fear other names must still be added to the melancholy list."

The Louisiana Advertiser of the 14th inst. says—"It will be perceived from the list of interments that the epidemic has not decreased within the present month, and we fear that it would be as bad as it has ever been, but for the want of subjects. We must again caution our absent friends to be cautious in venturing into the city too early. Strangers and unacclimated persons will certainly run a great risk in venturing into town before frost."

There were 293 interments in the Catholic and Protestant Cemetries, from the 1st to the 14th inst.—whole number of deaths from the commencement of the disease, 2,609.

Mrs. Hannah More died on the 7th, at her residence in Windsor Terrace, Clifton, England, in the 80th year of her age. Few persons have enjoyed a higher degree of public esteem and veneration than this excellent and distinguished lady.

It has been understood in this community for several days, that GEORGE NEWTON, Esq. has resigned the Presidency of the Bank of the United States, in this Borough—an office which he has held since the establishment of the institution here, discharging its duties to the entire satisfaction, we believe, of all having any interest in the transactions of the Bank. We are uninformed of the reasons which have produced this determination with the worthy President.

The process of inserting the tubes into the rock recently bored at Holt's Hotel was performed with perfect success the present week. The manner was exceedingly simple, but it required great care and skill.—The tubes are brass, tinned inside and out, and made in the most substantial manner. The pump will shortly be finished, and the proprietors wishes will, it is believed, be fully realized.—Gazette.

This, coupled with the cause of the vance being so small, namely, the prospect large and an early crop, has had a bad effect on our timid holders. The sales of the week mount to only about 4400 bales, of which about 1500 went to speculators. The reduction in price is not easily got at; several of our holders have been governed by fear alone, and some have sold at a reduction of 1d. per lb. from the highest prices in order to "get out." In altering our quotations however, we shall not, for the present, take more that ½d. per lb. in any instance, and for better qualities we shall decline ¼d. only, though believe is as much as holders generally would submit to—though many sales have been made at reduction of ½d. per lb. and some, under the influence of panic, as stated, even at a greater reduction prices of three weeks ago.

At Havre, by the last accounts, there were reduced about 1d. per lb.

The business would have been increased such was the anxiety of some holders to sell the buyers became alarmed, and declined as they intended.

The sales of all kinds this day about 5 the market of course quiet.

Liverpool, Sept. 16. Our Cotton market dy, and the sales to-day have amounted to 2000 bags, without change of prices.

Liverpool Sept 17.—We have had a limited mand for Cotton to-day, and the sales have ed to about 500 bags only, but without in price.

Sept. 18.—We have no change to prices of cotton to-day, and the sales amount bout 1000 bags.

The Shah of Persia's Plate.—The of Persia possesses the most magnificent lection of plate in the world. It consists upwards of 4,000 utensils of gold, which are set with precious stones or p Among them are sets of spoons, vases jugs, basins, dishes, &c.; some of the are so heavy that when filled they cannot lifted with one hand. Perhaps the most markable portion of the collection is a set spoons, each a foot long. The bowls these spoons are of wrought gold, and handles are richly set with rubies, and minated by large diamonds. The immense size of these spoons is occasioned by the riental custom of eating, seated on ground.

Foreigners are permitted to see this splendid and unique collection of plate, and the crystal bedstead lately presented by Emperor of Russia to the Shah of Persia

[APPOI]NTMENT BY THE PRESIDENT.

[Peter V.] Daniel, of Richmond, Virginia, to be [Attorney] General of the United States, in the place [of R.] B. Taney, resigned.

[Nullif]ication of the Civil Authority.—The [United States tr]oops some weeks ago killed a Col. [Owens, w]ho resided among the Indians [within the l]imits of Alabama, because he [made an at]tempt to drive him out of the [Indian] territory. This has created great [excite]ment in Alabama, and apprehensions [are en]tertained of a collision between the [troops] and the citizens of the State. It will [be seen] by the following, that the governor [of Alab]ama has been applied to for a force [...] the commanding officer, Major Mc[Intosh].

[From] THE COLUMBUS (GEORGIA) DEMOCRAT.

[The S]uperior court for Russel county, Ala. has [been] [for] most of the week employed in inves[tigating] the murder of Owens. Judge Harris pre[sided.] The Solicitor General Col. Picket has [been e]mployed in ferreting out the testimony [which is] exceedingly difficult to come at, as it [...] persons were immediately present, but [a detach]ment of troops who were concerned in [it. ...] we learn that the Solicitor addressed [...] the commander of the Fort, Maj. Mc[Intosh, ...] the difficulty, and requesting a su[rrender of] this file of soldiers who were present at the killing of Owens to the sheriff of Russel county, in order that an investigation might be had, at the same time forwarding the Globe of 24th Aug. which contained an article stating, that the commander at the Fort had instructions to aid the State in the investigation. To this request, the commander replied that he had received no such instructions and that he would not comply and that the soldier who shot Owens did it in the execution of his lawful duty. Process was then issued out for certain soldiers and suspected persons in the Fort, but without success, the Maj. informing the Sheriff upon a demand being made that he would not give up a man; an attachment was then issued against the Major for a contempt of the Court, which was also disobeyed, the Sheriff returning that he could not take the Major without danger of his life.

It appears also that a subpœna was issued for Lieut. Manning and served, but he also refused to obey it; we learn under this state of things and upon the affidavit of the Sheriff that the force of the county was inadequate to serve process on persons in the Fort, that the presiding Judge despatched a messenger to the Governor of that State calling on him for aid.

We have also learned that true bills for murder have been found against divers soldiers at the Fort, and also against other individuals who were concerned in the transaction.

It now remains to be seen whether the military authority is to control the civil. Here is a handful of United States' soldiers within the border of the State who hold themselves above the laws of the county, and set the laws and the Officers at defiance. Will Alabama submit to this?

INTERNAL IMPROVEMENT MEETING.

On Wednesday the 9th inst., a number of the citizens of Montgomery county, convened in the court house at Lawrenceville, for the purpose of expressing their views on the subject of the internal improvement of the State, and of appointing Delegates from said County, to the internal improvement convention to be held at Salisbury on the 17th inst., and also of appointing Delegates to the convention of the State, to be held at Raleigh on the 4th Monday in November next; when, on motion, the Hon. Edmund Deberry was unanimously called to the chair, and John B. Martin appointed Secretary. The object of the meeting having been explained by the Chairman, the following resolutions, offered by James L. Gaines, Esq. were unanimously adopted.

Resolved, That in the opinion of this meeting, it comports with the best interests of N. Carolina, to adopt some judicious and efficient system of internal improvement, that would afford cheap and convenient transportation of the produce of the State, to some one or more market towns within the limits of the same.

Resolved further, That from the local situation of the town of Fayetteville, and the advantages attending the navigation of the Cape Fear, we deem that the most eligible place for concentrating the trade of the Western counties of this State, and that the construction of a Rail Road from that place to some point on the Yadkin, would be one of the most efficient means of attaining that object and of promoting the interest and prosperity of this section of the State.

Resolved further, That with a view of aiding our fellow citizens of other counties in the attainment of these objects, delegates be appointed by this meeting to attend the internal improvement convention, to be held in Salisbury on the 17th inst., as delegates from this county.

A committee of three persons consisting of John M. Allen, Thos. Pemberton and Jas. L. Gaines, Esq'rs. was then appointed by the chairman, to name twenty persons from this County, as Delegates to the proposed convention to be held in Salisbury, who reported the following as suitable persons for that purpose, viz:—

James Allen, Esq., Col. John Crump, Captain Francis Locke, Edmund F. Lilly, Esq., Col. Reuben Kendall, Geo. W. McCain, Esq., Hon. Edmund Deberry, Jas. L. Gaines, Thos. Pemberton, John B. Martin, James M. Lilly, John M. Allen, Duncan McRae, Esq., Edw'd. McCallum, John Steele, Richard Stoker, David Cochran, William A. Mask, Esq., Jas. M. Butler and William Chrisian, which report was agreed to by the meeting.

On several motions, James Allen, Esq., James M. Lilly and James L. Gaines, were nominated and appointed by the meeting, to attend the convention to be held in Raleigh on the fourth Monday in November next.

On motion, it was ordered, that the proceedings of this meeting be published in the Salisbury and Fayetteville papers.

The meeting, on motion, having returned its thanks to the chairman for the manner in which he conducted its proceedings, adjourned.

JOHN B. MARTIN, Sec'y.

Internal Improvement Convention at Salisbury.—We have not yet received any account of the proceedings of this meeting, other than the article from the Western Carolinian, which we insert below. The papers in that town went to press about the time the Convention adjourned, and the journal of that body cannot be expected until next week.

We learn from a private source, that fifteen counties were represented, and that the deliberations were characterised by great harmony, and the leading resolutions adopted with perfect unanimity. The substance of these resolutions, we understand, is that public aid is indispensable to the accomplishment of any judicious system of improvement, and that the State should obtain such a loan as will enable her either to have these works constructed entirely at the public expense, or to extend such substantial aid to corporate bodies as will ensure the immediate commencement and vigorous prosecution of the system. If the latter plan shall be determined on, the proportion of two-fifths by the State, and three-fifths by individuals, is recommended. The Convention determined unanimously to forbear recommending any particular object of improvement, upon the ground that local preferences should, in every instance, be yielded to the public good, and that the scheme to be adopted might, with more propriety, be referred to the Convention which is to assemble in this city on the fourth Monday in November, in which every county in the State will be represented.

This course, in our estimation, manifests a spirit of compromise, liberality and magnanimity worthy of all commendation. Let every section learn to discard and discountenance those local prejudices and petty jealousies, which have so long distracted our public councils. Let the patriotic advances of our western brethren be met by the determination, in every section of the State, to regard ourselves as members of one great political family, the prosperity and character of which can only be ensured by united and harmonious effort, and all will be well. It is apparent that success can be attained in no other way, and this patriotic body of citizens will have accomplished much good, if their attempt to produce a spirit of harmony shall have the desired effect. If it does not, they will be entitled to the credit of having set an example which is entitled to, and will receive the approbation of all those whose views are as expansive as the interests of a common country.—Raleigh Star.

The Committee appointed to receive subscriptions to Rail Road Stock in Newbern, have reported a sum amounting to about thirty thousand dollars. Though this is not more than ought to have been expected, we may still rejoice that even this much has been obtained. The far greater number of subscribers are men of comparatively limited means; but convinced that experience as well as necessity demanded their exertions, they had no hesitation in giving such assistance as was in their power. Beyond a doubt, the spirit of improvement has gone and is going abroad. "Like the spirit of liberty, it never goes backward." Most of the monied men shook their heads and kept close. It is to be hoped however, that if some years hence they enjoy the fruits of this public enterprize, they will give the credit where credit is due. It is generally believed that Craven will go in for at least $60,000.—Newbern Sentinel.

We have heard of a Dutchman in the State of New York, who when he discovered that the great canal was about to run through his land, went and hung himself in a fit of despair. Five years afterwards, his farm was raised to three times its former value, by the very measure which he so fatally deprecated. He imagined, very probably, that by thus opening a way to market for the produce of such a vast quantity of uncultivated western land, the canal would reduce the profits of his wheat crops at least one half. But the event falsified his forebodings. And thus it is with every great measure of liberal policy. Industry, if encouraged, will never become a drug, and if the productions of labour be brought to a large market, they will always find purchasers.—Ib.

We learn from the Albany Argus that the amount of tolls received upon the State Canals in the month of September, was $203,685 82; being an increase of $52,634, as compared with the receipts of the same month last year. Receipts of the year to 30th September, 998,176 20; exceeding the receipts of last year, down to the same date, more than $210,000.

Affairs at Washington.—We have various rumours from Washington. The greatest confusion and disunion are said to prevail in the Cabinet; the President is almost "worn to the bone,"—and many of his best friends fear that he will not survive his present term. There is no harmony between Messrs. McLane and Taney, and crowds of office hunters continue to haunt the palace and prey upon the aged President. These things cannot last. There must be another explosion, and we trust that the next will destroy the real mischief-makers—such vermin as——, & ——, & ——, and their confederates.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

We observe, by the Official paper of yesterday, that a Mr. Gwin has been appointed Marshal of the State of Mississippi. Can he be the same Mr. Gwin who, not long ago, gave the following blaphemous toast at a public dinner in Mississippi?—Nat. Int.

"By W. Gwin.—Jackson, as near as he can be, the fac simile of the Rock of Ages. Those that place their confidence in him cannot fall."

The Greensborough Patriot has already predicted that the next Legislature will do nothing for the relief of the State, either in the matter of establishing a Bank or in aiding works of improvement: We can foresee cause for dissention—we can see the old cause which has heretofore kept North Carolina from advancing—the narrow selfish wish of every section to begin first, and when disappointed in obtaining this end, out of mere spleen and jealousy, the throwing the whole weight of that section against the policy; but there are other causes and motives which we think must counteract and dispel the prejudices of the demagogue. The people have spoken: In their primary assemblies they have said the next Legislature must do something for us. "We have given them full power," say they—we are willing that they should call up the latent resources of the State. We see that our sluggishness has already become a hissing and a reproach with our neighbors—we urge and insist that something shall be done for the credit of our names and the prosperity of our farmers, and to prevent the perpetual moving of our best citizens to the West." With such instructions from the people themselves to their agents, they will scarcely dare to let local prejudice, or the selfishness of individual opinion, stand in the way of doing something.—Salisbury Watchman.

Our City.—The ranges of brick Stores on Fayetteville street, with heavy granite fronts, are now so nearly completed, as to give to the spectator some definite idea of what the appearance of our City will be, when all its improvements are consummated. Some one has remarked that Raleigh will be among the very handsomest towns in the Southern part of the Union, and we are confident the assertion will be sustained by all whom business or pleasure may bring to our City.

Jonathan Lewis, whose trial took place at Louisburg, on the 9th inst. has been acquitted and set at liberty under a promise not to return to this city again. The following letter is from a gentleman who was present at the trial, to the editor.

Louisburg, Oct. 9, 1833.

DEAR SIR,—The trial of Jonathan Lewis for the crime of arson, occupied the whole of this day, and terminated in the acquittal of the prisoner. The evidence in behalf of the State, was entirely circumstantial, and although it established very satisfactorily, that the house was burnt by design, it was too slight in convicting the prisoner with it, to authorize a verdict of guilty. The charge of the Judge was favourable to the prisoner upon the latter point. The prosecution was conducted by the Attorney General, and the prisoner defended by Wm. H. Haywood and Wm. Plummer, Esqrs.—The prisoner has been discharged, under a promise that he is not again to return to your city.

Two Jurors were fined last week by Judge Settle for going to sleep while on duty. Justice, though blindfolded, must never nod.

The following was among the regular toasts at the celebration of St. George's day in Quebec:

"England and the United States of America—may the Atlantic which rolls between them always be a Pacific Ocean."

"What will you take, sir—tea or coffee, sir?" said a waiter at a fashionable hotel, to a western merchant, who was seated at the breakfast table, munching a sandwich—"Why, I dont know," was the reply, "what are you going to take yourself."

A gentleman having given a quantity of peaches to some Irish laborers on a rail road in the vicinity of Boston, one of them was asked how he liked them, he said, the fruit was very good, but the seeds scratched his throat a little as he swallowed them.

Anecdote.—We have heard of an Editor who took up one of his own papers, which accidentally had slipped in among those received by the mail, and was so much smitten with an article of his own composition, which at the moment he happened not to recognize, that he actually marked it for insertion, and placed it in the compositor's hands.—People's Press.

Saltpetre.—Professor Rafinesque of New York, in a late number of the New York Farmer, denounces the use of saltpetre in brine intended for the preservation of animal flesh to be kept for food. That part of the saltpetre which is absorbed by the meat, he says, is nitric acid, or aqua fortis—a deadly poison. Animal flesh, previous to the addition of pickle, consists of gelatinous substances, the former only possessing a nutritious virtue. This gelatine is destroyed by the chemical action of salt and saltpetre: and as the professor remarks, the meat becomes a different substance from what it should be, as leather is from the raw hide before it is subjected to the process of tanning. He ascribes to the pernicious effects of this chemical change, all the diseases which are common to mariners and others who subsist principally on salted meat—such as scurvy, sore gums, decayed teeth, ulcers, &c—and advises a total abandonment of the use of saltpetre in the making of pickle for beef, pork, &c. The best substitute for which, he says, is sugar—a small quantity rendering the meat sweeter, more wholesome, and equally as durable.

A few weeks since, at Clinton, Mississippi, JAS. M. WRIGHT, Esq., Attorney at Law, and eldest son of Isaac Wright, Esq., of Bladen County.

Died at Averasborough, on the 17th inst., Mr. WILLIAM SMITH, aged 57 years, a highly esteemed and much respected citizen, and long an active and zealous elder of the Presbyterian Church. It is seldom that the community has been called on to mourn the loss of one of its members, possessing in so eminent a degree, more moral and religious requisitions than the subject of this obituary. As a neighbor he was liberal and hospitable, as a master he was indulgent and humane, as a friend he was disinterested and true, as a husband and parent he was kind and affectionate. His government was of love and his precepts of peace. He was emphatically "an honest man"—a sincere and devoted christian. Those who knew him best will lament him most. He died as he had lived, a christian, full of the christian's hope, the christian's certainty of a happy and a blissful immortality. And while his family and his numerous relatives and friends, cannot but mourn their bereavement, they are cheered with the idea that he has been taken from the trials and perplexities and difficulties of this world, to enjoy so much sooner, the rich rewards of the righteous, "where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest."—[COMMUNICATED.

Medical College of S. Carolina.

UNDER THE SUPERINTENDENCE AND PATRONAGE OF THE MEDICAL SOCIETY OF SOUTH CAROLINA.

THE TRUSTEES of this Institution inform the public that they have filled all the vacant Chairs, and that the regular course of Lectures will commence, as usual, on the 2d Monday in November.

In selecting gentlemen to become Professors in the Medical College of South Carolina, the Trustees were influenced alone by a sense of public duty. They therefore invited talent from every quarter of our widely extended country, being solicitous alone for the promotion of Medical Science, and of perpetuating a Medical School at the South. This they flatter themselves they have accomplished.

This Institution presents many advantages. It has a commodious Building, a valuable Library, a well selected and arranged Museum of Natural History and Mineralogy, an excellent Chemical Apparatus, a good Museum of Anatomy, and the newly elected Professor of that Chair will bring with him a Museum of Healthful and Morbid Anatomy, which contains upwards of 1300 Specimens, 300 Oil Paintings and Drawings, and a great number of Casts. The newly elected Professor of Obstetrics will also bring a Museum connected with his Department not surpassed by any in the United States. Adjoining the College are two Public Institutions, viz. the Marine Hospital and Alms House, which are under the superintendence of the Medical Society and the Professors of the College, and where Clinics will be delivered by the Professor of the Theory and Practice of Physic and the Professor of Surgery. The Trustees regret that the season was so far advanced before the re-organization of the College could be effected, but they thought it a duty to the State and to the City which have endowed this College, as well as to the Medical profession, to be certain of the character and attainments of the Candidates before they appointed them as Professors. The College they can now recommend as possessing advantages not surpassed by any in the United States.

The following are the Professors:—

John R. Rhinelander, M. D. Professor of Anatomy.
Thomas Y. Simons, M. D. Professor of Theory and Practice of Physic.
William Anderson, M. D. Professor of Surgery.
Andrew Hasell, M. D. Professor of Materia Medica.
Charles Davis, M. D. Professor of Chemistry.
Henry Alexander, M. D. Professor of Institutes of Medicine.
G. S. Bedford, M. D. Professor of Obstetrics and Diseases of Women and Children.

The Trustees of the Medical College of South Carolina, consist of the following gentlemen:

FRANCIS Y. PORCHER, M. D.
E. W. NORTH, M. D.
B. B. SIMONS, M. D.
JOSEPH GLOVER, M. D.
HORATIO S. WARING, M. D.

T. AIKEN, M. D.
J. DE LA MOTTA, M. D.
